Dear Joseph

I enjoyed our conversation earlier today about your plans for expanding Xtreme AI within the Australian and US market.

As you know we are well established in Sydney with affiliate offices in the USA and New Zealand. I am also delighted to announce our new office in Canada will open next month, which will present many more opportunities for furthering client interests.

I have included further information about our operations and services in the United States and I look forward to discussing how we can help you.

Yours Faithfully

You're not lost.
You never had a map.

You've been using the word 'should' your entire adult life. You should be further along. You should be handling this better. You should want what you have. The unfucked you is for the man who is finally ready to ask whose voice that actually is.

WORK WITH ME

Here's what the men who come to this work actually look like — not in crisis, not falling apart, just quietly running on empty.

You're busy. Genuinely, relentlessly busy.
And if you slow down for long enough, you feel something you can't name — so you don't slow down.

You reach for food, or a drink, or your phone, or work — not because you're hungry or thirsty or bored, but because five minutes alone with yourself has started to feel like a threat.

You've tried. Therapy. The books. The podcast rabbit holes at midnight. Something shifts for a few weeks, then you're back. And the fact that you're back feels like evidence of something shameful about you.

that are running you were written long before you were old enough to question them.

That's what this work is about.

What this is

The Unfucked You is a three-phase process — Dismantle, Rewire, Rebuild — for men who are ready to stop managing their symptoms and start addressing their source.

It isn't therapy. It isn't positive psychology. It isn't a twelve-week transformation with a certificate at the end.

It's the process of finding out what you're actually running, where it came from, and what it would take to change it at the level it actually lives — which is not in your head.

The first sign that something is changing isn't that a man feels better. It's that he can sit in discomfort without immediately reaching for something.

That's the work. And it's available as 1:1 coaching, a group men's container, or a self-paced course — depending on where you are and what you're ready for.

HOW IT WORKS

The man this is for

You might be a father navigating separation, trying to work out who you are when the structure of a family life has been pulled out from under you.

You might be a man who built a career, a relationship, a version of himself — and one day noticed that none of it felt like it actually belonged to him.

You might be successful in the ways that were supposed to matter. And you might be wondering why that's made so little difference to the thing underneath.

You might just be exhausted by the effort of performing a version of yourself that was built for someone else's comfort.

What you have in common with every man who comes to this work isn't a particular circumstance. It's a particular word.

You've been trying. And trying is not the same as living.

Why work with Nick

I spent twenty years in recruitment. I was good at reading people and I was very good at being useful to them. What I was less good at was knowing who I was when I stopped being useful.

When my relationship ended in 2021 I found out something I hadn't expected: I had no idea who I was without it. I was rudderless. I couldn't conceptualise myself outside of the structures I'd built my identity around.

I'm a father of three daughters. That's the fact that changed everything — not because it gave me answers, but because it made looking away impossible.

The Unfucked Paradigm isn't something I built and stepped away from. It's my medicine too. I come back to this framework because I still need it. That's not a weakness in the methodology. That's what makes it real.

ABOUT NICK

Ready to start?

If you've read this far, something in here has already landed with you. The application is five questions. It takes just five minutes. It doesn't commit you to anything except the act of being honest about where you are.

That, as it turns out, is where everything starts.
